Summer Reading

7th Grade:

Among the Hidden, by Margaret Peterson

8th Grade:

The Outsiders, by S.E. Hinton

Read the book that is listed for the grade that you will be entering in the fall. Read the book carefully. Take notes that will help you remember important elements, perhaps using sticky notes to mark significant passages or questions you might have about the reading.

Also, pick an opportune time to read the summer reading book. Don't read it so early in the summer that you don't remember what it is about by the time school starts back up. Also, don't read it so late that you are not finished with it when school starts.

Please do not cheat yourself or your classmates by resorting to Cliffs Notes, Spark Notes, or other "study guides." These deprive you of the chance to respond to the literature independently and are never an adequate substitute for the book itself. Furthermore, using them instead of the reading the book is considered cheating.

You will be tested on the summer reading book within the first week of returning to school.

Summer Reading

9th Grade:

Miracle Worker, by William Gibson

Alice in Wonderland, by Lewis Carroll

10th Grade:

Night, by Elie Wiesel

Old Man and the Sea, by Ernest Hemingway

11th Grade:

The Great Gatsby, by F. Scott Fitzgerald

Daisy Miller, by Henry James

12th Grade:

Frankenstein, by Mary Shelly

Animal Farm, by George Orwell

Read the two books that are listed for the grade that you will be entering in the fall. Read the books carefully. Take notes that will help you remember important elements, perhaps using sticky notes to mark significant passages or questions you might have about the reading.
